Not illustrated. 1845 Excerpt: .of persons there, which demand was not made by the laity alone, but in which the clergy joined to a very considerable extent. These two classes united in calling upon the Government to make some provision for the better education of persons in the middle ranks of life, by the foundation of scholarships, and the establishment of Colleges or institutions where instruction in the higher branches of learning could be offered at a moderate cost, and of a superior quality. The object which the Bill was expressly devised to achieve, was that which he had just described. But he would beg to ask the noble Earl who had just sat down, whether he thought the measure would prove of any benefit whatever to Ireland, if it were to be confined exclusively to persons of one form of religious belief? Would any person professing other religious belief,...
