Not illustrated. 1904 edition. Excerpt: .plate, which is screwed to fit the nose of the mandrel, and is the narrow one. The double chamfered steel bars are fixed to the front or broad plate. Two steel pallets are then fixed across the back of the chuck, being attached to the steel bars, and set-screws are provided to adjust them to their relative positions in reference to the movable ring upon which they operate. The sliding ring, which is cast in the solid with a metal frame, is attached to the face of the headstock by two steel centre-screws, the points fitting into corresponding centres in the headstock, and when fitting up the frame, it should be chucked by the centre hole and the ring turned inside and out; it is then rechucked by the periphery of the ring, and the back turned as far as the projecting bosses through...
