For the following account of his tomb I am indebted to my friend Mr. W. H. Richardson, E. S. A. In the south (chancel) aisle of the parish church of St. Michael, Blewbury, Berks, placed longitudinally against the wall, is a large moulded slab of Purbeck marble, raised some few inches above the floor, bearing the full-length figures, in brass, of Sir John Daunce, in armour, and wearing thereupon a surcoat of his arms; and of his wife, Dame Alice Daunce, habited in a long mantle, the dexter side displaying the arms of Daunce, and the sinister the quartered a 2 coats of Latton, Percy, Estbury, and Syckeville. Beneath is the following inscription: --Of your charity pray for the soll of Dame Alice Daunce, dowghter of Thomas Latton, gentl. late the wife of Sr John Daunce, Knight, Councillor and Surveyour-Generall unto our Soveraigne Lord King...
